ORGANISATIONAL SKILLS

Internal/External Organisational Skills

Since I was 20 years old, I had the desire to be economically independent but at the same time keep enriching my knowledge through a university path. Since then, I have been working and studying, and therefore, managing my time and prioritizing tasks.

in 2019 after my graduation, I decided to take a gap year before enrolling in a master fully taught in English because my level of the language was quite poor. So I did, I moved to London, improved my English skills, took an IELTS test, came back and enrolled in a master fully taught in English.

Besides that, living for a while in a high paced city as London is, it helped to develop several organizational skills: studying in the morning and working in the night helped to better manage my time and handle with external pressures. Working with other people and customers also improved my teamworking, capability to understand customers' requests and solve them and having critical thinking or empathy toward both customers and work colleagues.

COMMUNICATION AND INTERPERSONAL SKILLS

Interpersonal Skills/soft Skills

For what concern my first experience abroad in Mexico, I was thrown in a different place with different habits and language and dealing with that was tough. There I developed effective communication skills and adaptability skills.

Another source of lessons for me was the experience I made in London; working in high paced places helped to get to know me better: how I respond working in a team, under pressure or how I can deal with customers, understand their needs and help them. I felt that experience as fundamental for my knowledge of the job market in general.
